Description

TERMS OF SPECIFICATIONS

Airfare of the OPAA for the Reconnecting with France and Europe After 20 Years - The Philippine Week in Paris, France

December 7-11, 2024

Background

December 2024: a symbolic month for launching the new route

The Paris-Manila route will officially open on the first weekend of December, a symbolic month that coincides with the festive Christmas season and the reopening of the Notre-Dame Cathedral in Paris, after five years of restoration work. In a few months, passengers will benefit from regular flights between the two countries, with a frequency of three flights a week. A strategic connection to boost trade, tourism and exchanges between France and the Philippines, and more generally with Europe.

The connection of the two air hubs – Paris Charles de Gaulle Airport (CDG) and Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) – consolidates France’s role as a gateway to Europe for the Philippines, which is currently the only major Southeast Asian country without a direct connection to the European Union. This marks a significant step in the strengthening of bilateral relations between France and the Philippines, offering new opportunities for mobility, and economic, tourism, cultural development, and student exchange. It will help boost French and European investment in a particularly dynamic Philippine market.

This initiative also illustrates Air France’s commitment to establishing a long-term presence in the Philippine market, at a time when flights between Europe and the Philippines are set to increase by +4.1% a year between now and 2042. France reaffirms its commitment to developing strategic partnerships and deepening its relations with the Philippines, as illustrated by the opening of a resident defense mission in June 2024 and the installation of the embassy in its new premises at the beginning of the year, with enhanced resources.
